Red Ribbon Week is a special time in the United States when we talk about why it's important to stay away from drugs. It happens every year in October. The idea started because a man named Enrique Camarena was trying to stop drug dealers, but they hurt and killed him. People wanted to remember him and help others stay safe from drugs, so they started the Red Ribbon Campaign.

They picked a red ribbon to show that we want our communities to be free from drugs. Since 1988, many schools and communities have been celebrating Red Ribbon Week. During this week, we learn about how drugs can be harmful and talk about making good choices for our health. There are often fun activities and events that help us remember to stay away from drugs and live healthy lives.
