WHAT I LEARNED

Muhammad Ali was a legendary boxer and an inspiring figure. Born on January 17, 1942, in Louisville, Kentucky, he became the first three-time heavyweight champion of the world. Ali was known for his quick footwork, powerful punches, and his famous phrase, "Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee." He was not only a great athlete but also a charismatic and outspoken personality who stood up for his beliefs. He refused to be drafted into the military during the Vietnam War, citing religious reasons. Ali's contributions to the world of sports and his impact on civil rights make him an enduring icon.
